

tazti Speech Recognition mashup to Facebook, Myspace, iTunes, and many search engines is announced

Los Angeles, CA July 28, 2008 Voice Tech Group, Inc. today announced the immediate availability of tazti™ (pronounced tasty) speech recognition software, the first speech recognition software to enable a user to log into and navigate Facebook and Myspace “by talking to their PC.” In addition a user can “talk to their PC” to perform searches, local searches and “spellsearches” of Google, Yahoo!, MSN, ASK, AOL Video, Wikipedia, YouTube, eBay, Amazon, Flickr, Facebook, MySpace, and even Google Finance (for stock market data). Another tazti feature allows users to create their own speech commands and associate a web page, file or program to each new speech command. tazti also enables a user to control the iTunes music player application when it is installed on their PC, via 35 speech commands. Speech commands for iTunes includes changing tracks, searching iTunes music store and controlling most music player capabilities by talking to their PC.

Available now from <http://www.tazti.com>, tazti speech recognition software is a free download for all users.

Road warriors using a notebook PC, Mobile Internet Device or Ultra Mobile PC can use the speech recognition voice search - local search capability and other features in tazti wherever they can get connectivity. They can search for a coffee shop in a particular city or zipcode or for anything else on the internet, by voice. The user interface for tazti is engineered for ease of use and fun.

tazti versions are available for Windows Vista and XP, XP Pro, & XP Tablet operating systems. tazti can also be installed on Intel based Macs running Parallels or other similar desktop environments.
